On account of the pressure of both news and advertisements upon our columns, at the present time, and to enable THE STAR to be circulated at the earliest hour possible each day, advertisers are requested to send in their favors as early in the day as practicable. They must be in hand before 12 o'clock to insure insertion the same day, and they ought to be in as much earlier than that as is possible in each case.

The Brooklyn Horror.

The later reports concerning the frightful calamity at the Brooklyn Theater show that the loss of life was even greater than our dispatches of yesterday set forth. The inquiry naturally occurs why this great loss of life occurred? We are informed by those acquainted with the position and surroundings of the Brooklyn Theater, that the theater building embraced within its walls the post office, the police station, the Sunday Sun office, and Deitrich's hotel. It was literally enclosed in a hollow square-the audience reached their seats through a hall-way leading to and around the rear of the first circle. At the end of this the stairs commence leading to the upper circles. Experienced theatrical people concur that the loss of life was entirely confined to the upper circles, and to those on the stage that attempted to save their wardrobes before making their escape. Manager Ford's theory is that the fire was burning for some time in the scenery above the stage, and the carpenters endeavored to extinguish it before any alarm was given-a ceiling piece of scenery screening it from the audience and actors for a while; but the carpenters cut away the ropes at last, and the burning material fell upon the ceiling piece, which is used in the last act, and ignited it, and the rest of the scenery nearest the stage. At this moment the panic evidently occurred, and the hall and stairway were choked up with a frantic, frightened crowd. The lower floor was soon cleared, but the smoke impeded and finally suffocated those in the upper circles some time before the flames reached where they fell, swooned

Manager Ford says that this is but the second instance in the United States of a loss of life by the burning of theaters. The first was the Richmond theater, in 1811, and the cause there was very similar to the Brooklyn hor-

Our theaters are well provided in such emergencies with facilities of escape. The National has a passageway on each side, and large doorways opening out to them. Both of the upper circles have separate stairways leading out of the house without going through the vestibule. The stage also has a largedoor on the rear alley, as well as doors on the open passageways adjoining.

it is understood that in this city since the Richmond fire, near ten million auditors have visited places of amusements and lectures without the slightest accident occurring. and in the entire country it might be claimed that a thousand million have been entertained without mishap. Consequently, fearful as this terrible calamity appears, it does not prove our theaters to be by any means dan-

Shall We Have Mexican Politics?

The returning boards of the three disputed states have as the result of their canvass of the votes of those states declared the election of the Hayes and Wheeler electors, thus adding 19 votes to the 166 previously held by the republican candidates for President and Vice President, giving them nominally the 185 electoral votes requisite for a majority. But from all three of these states counter claims come in behalf of Tilden and Headricks, lacking, however, the endorsement of the returning boards and of the governors of the respective states. From Oregon, also, the claim is presented of a democratic electoral vote for Tilden and Hendricks on the ground of the ineligibility of one of the republican electors This claim is strengthened by the fact that the governor of that state has commissioned a democratic elector. If this vote is counted for Tilden of course it elects him, but naturally the republican party will make vigorous opposition to being counted out in Oregon, just as the democrats will to being counted out in Louisiana. The complicated question is now precipitated upon Congress; one branch of which is republican, and the other democratic. How to settle it short of a descent to the Mexican style of politics is a problem that will task the best men of the country. If we have any statesmen amongst us this complication will develop them.

The new democratic daily made its appearance this morning in quite handsome and newsy shape, and bearing the title of The Union, a much handler name for journalistic uses than the cumbrous "Constitutional Union," first proposed. The editorials are well written, and not too ponderous; and, altogether, the new paper makes a promising

The action of the governor of Oregon in giving an electoral certificate to a democratic elector is a bit of sharp practice which only the professional politician will endorse. Still, as Boss Tweed was wont to inquire, "What are you going to do about it?" If the twenty-second joint rule is inoperative, and if the vote of no state, which comes properly attested by the governor, can be thrown out, it will be the plain duty of the presiding officer of the Senate to count the vote of Cronin. the democratic elector. This would, of course, be defeating the will of a majority of the people of Oregon, but nevertheless it is held that the presiding officer of the Senate cannot go behind the certificates of the governors of states. Of course it may be claimed on the democratic side that this affords only an offset to the action of the returning board in Louisiana; but supposing the latter to have been fraudulent, two wrongs do not make a right. In fact, the party that now counts itself in by fraud or by sharp practice will be pretty certainly counted out by the people at the next

A new complication has been added to the electoral muddle in Florida, it will be seen, and the democrats return a set of Tilden elec-

Marshal Concha, of Spain, estimates the total force of the insurgent Cubans at only 0. He recommends that they be isolated in the woods and kept there. This is a virtual admission that the insurgents cannot be conquered. Keeping an army of 70,000 men in Cuba to isolate the insurgents is rather an expensive operation, and it might be cheaper in the end to make peace with them at once. Marshal Concha himself was not long since commander-in-chief of the forces in Cuba, and his views on Cuban affairs are therefore worth noting.

----This is a curious position of affairs. The electoral vote was declared yesterday in all the states, and yet nobody to-day, republican or democrat, feels able to say who is Presi-

If many more deaths from hydrophobia occurring from the bite of Spitz dogs are reported, that particular breed of canines will soon become unpopular. Another case of this kind occurred on Staten Island on Sunday last, the victim being a boy six years of age, who was bitten in July last. It is suggested that the small number of the medical fraternity who still insist that there is no such malady as hydrophobia may do so simply because they are compelled to confess their inability to cure it.

Representative Wood, of New York, was perhaps technichally right yesterday when he denied the anthority of the President to send informal reports to Congress, such as the report of the committee which recently visited New Orleans at the request of the President. Senator Sherman in his remarks yesterday, however, held that it was the duty of the President to submit the information relative to the Louisiana election to Congress, as there was no matter of more importance than the questions connected with the canvassing boards and making of a President of the United States. He for one would vote for the printing of the report of the delegation sent out by the National Democratic Committee, believing that the country should be placed in full possession of all the facts. This seems a fair view to take of the matter. Let both reports be printed in order that the people may judge for themselves.

Now that the returning boards of Louisiana, Florida, and South Carolina have got through their work, those states will cease to be points of special interest. That interest will now settle in Washington, and will continue here until the counting of the votes in February, at least.

NATTAN'S CRYSTAL DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR,

OR RESTORING GRAY OR FADED HAIR TO ITS NATURAL AND YOUTHPUL COLOR. It makes barsh, dry and wiry hair smooth and glossy. It eradicates Dandruff, and its occasional application prevents and stops the hair falling.

Warranted to restore the color in three to ten days. Contains nothing whatever of an unhealthy or poisonous nature. Does not require shaking; does not soil linen or the finger nails; nor in fact, has it any of the objections so justly urged against the Sulphur and Lead Restoratives in the markets. Has been used for nearly eight years now with constantly increasing demand.
